

SIRS® Interactive Citizenship

Builds knowledge of government, economics, and world affairs

Open even more eyes

SIRS® Interactive Citizenship helps students learn about every facet of government, economics, and concepts underlying world affairs

Covering the fundamentals with current sources

SIRS Interactive Citizenship contains three award-winning interactive content sets: What Citizens Need to Know About Economics, What Citizens Need to Know About Government, and What Citizens Need to Know About World Affairs. In-depth chapter essays provide necessary background context and concepts.

However, the product doesn't rely on these titles alone. Links to current related articles, primary source documents, and websites make this an unparalleled educational resource that emphasizes reading, writing, and critical thinking skills drawing on the very latest information. The chapters and resources are thoughtfully integrated: the learning resources deepen the user's understanding of the chapters and the chapters provide a context for appreciating the resources.

The content is continuously updated and carefully monitored according to strict SIRS criteria for relevance, reliability, adherence to learning standards, and age-appropriateness—making it the perfect complement to any social science curriculum. Interactive Citizenship is updated daily and made available online through SIRS® Knowledge Source.

Interactive Citizenship provides schools with compelling, multidisciplinary learning resources for extending and reinforcing student achievement at all levels. With it, educators can integrate technology effectively into the curriculum—increasing technology literacy for all users.

These attributes and others meet NCLB requirements, qualifying for purchase through funds such as Title II-D and IV-B.

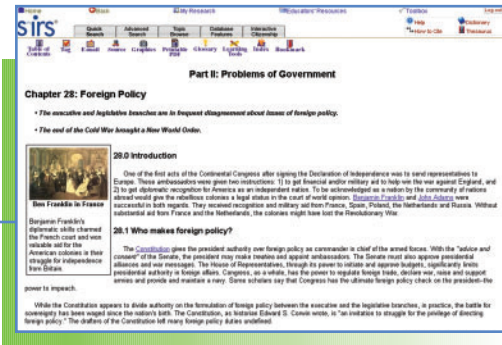

An index and familiar textbook style format make it easy to find relevant information. A glossary of key concepts and terms provides the user with the knowledge required to understand the complex topics of economics, government, and world affairs. Users can save and share data using tagged lists, or view, print or email any document in one easy step. Auto-generated bibliographies, session save, and bookmarking tools make the research process easy.

Bridge the gap between current events and enduring concepts in government, economics, and world affairs with SIRS Interactive Citizenship.

"I have found SIRS Interactive Citizenship's What Citizens Need to Know About Economics online text to be the most effective economics content for my high school classes. The text offers what few others do; it covers economics fundamentals effectively, efficiently, and is current. My students read the text at home and in class because it is well written and concise, it offers what a hardbound text can't, current economics reference...my students are meeting our economics state standards more quickly and it's sticking in their long-term learning."—George Thomson, Teacher, Nogales High School, Nogales, AZ

SIRS Interactive Citizenship

Mission Statement SIRS' mission is to provide cutting-edge content with state-of-the-art technology to create a citizenship database emphasizing reading, writing, and critical thinking skills. Each subject has what is known as a structure of the discipline consisting of basic facts and concepts. Interactive Citizenship presents basic enduring topics and dynamically links them to current information so users can understand how the past influences the present.

SIRS Interactive Citizenship:

- provides a foundation for learning
- enables educators to customize curriculum
- lets users create living textbooks
- combines the knowledge and credibility of a team of professionals
- uses technology to its greatest advantage
- meets NCLB requirements for title funds such as Title II-C, II-D, and V-A
- delivers sound educational concepts with the appropriate use of technology

Customizable Program SIRS Interactive Citizenship lets the educator customize the program based on local values as well as state and national standards. National and state standards are analyzed by SIRS staff and correlated to text chapters. Links are provided to state websites containing curriculum standards and learning outcomes. Instructors can integrate the program as a supplement to an existing textbook or curriculum, or use it as a standalone complete classroom solution.

Users Create a Personalized Living Book Interactive Citizenship accommodates diverse learning styles. Users can combine chapter text with primary source documents, articles, critical thinking activities, and original essays to create a personalized living book. This results in a record of the user's educational journey and can become a part of a lifelong learning portfolio.
